James V. Feliciano

BSIT - 32E3

To send a request without a verb is like a sentence without a soul, It tells the server clearly if your goal is part or whole.

If you want to fetch some data, then a GET is what you need, But use a POST to plant a brand-new digital-heavy seed.

A 404 means "Not Found," like a sock lost in the bin, It's the server's way of saying that your search didn't win.

But when you see a 200, then the world is bright and right, The "OK" means your packet reached the end of its long flight.

So mind your codes and methods to keep the web from acting rude, Because a broken header puts a coder in a sour mood.